TEXTILE SOCIETY of AMERICA

(re)Generation: Fibers of Resilience & Renewal

This academic event asks: “How do we transform a fragmented textile system into one that is circular, equitable, and life-affirming? How do we sustain the future of fiber art as a practice rooted in resilience, collective care, and environmental justice?” Featuring illuminating keynote speakers, short-film, and a “Warp Speed” panel with 3 peer-selected fellows from TSA's The Lab mentorship program, this colloquium explores regenerative justice through the lens of textiles, fiber art, and material culture.

The upcoming colloquium is expected to host over 300 live participants from around the world. Through support in part by the Decorative Arts Trust and our partnership with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Digital Commons, all sessions will be published as peer-reviewed, open-access proceedings. This collaboration creates a permanent, free educational resource, significantly extending the event's impact. To date, Textile Society of America (TSA) proceedings have been downloaded over 2 million times globally, including 221k+ downloads in 2025 alone. We anticipate an additional 14,000 downloads for this upcoming colloquium.
